普洱茶 Pu Er Tea

- 901 Yiwu Rustic Pu Er Tea (Sheng) 2001-2002 (Xishuangbanna, Yunnan) 12

The tea of the Yi Wu tea district (in Xishuangbanna, Yunnan) is rich with a distinctly open and expansive tea bouquet and potency. The production of this tea cake is primarily from "yellow flakes", "yellow flakes" typically are the relatively larger and older tea leaves that the tea farmers select from the raw tea for their own use. The tea infusion is satiny and gracious, sweet and rich, full and satisfying, with a clean and refreshing flavor and a "toothy" viscosity that makes the entire mouth salivate. The tea's energy is powerful, conveying a cool and refreshing sensation, effusing the fragrant aroma of primordial soil.

- 902 Aged Dong Ting Oolong (>30 years) (Nantou region of Central Taiwan) 15

This tea comes from Dong Ding Mountain. It was plucked and processed more than 30 years ago. Through natural fermentation over time its character has evolved into unique aroma and flavor. Its comfortable Cha Qi returns us to ages past.

- 903 2022 Alishan Honey Oolong (Alishan, Taiwan) 12

This tea has a honey and fruity fragrance because it is bug-bitten. As more tea farmers have gone organic, they have had to come up with ways to cope with the katydids that come and eat their tea, especially when neighbours use pesticides and all the bugs come to their fields. Allowing bugs to bite the tea, and then processing it accordingly, began with Oriental Beauty in Beipu County, but has recently spread to Nantou as well. This tea is processed with much more oxidation and roast than your typical Taiwanese oolong. Allowing the bugs to bite the tea means it will be more oxidized right off the bush. It also means that you can process it to have a honey fragrance. The bugs bite the leaves and their saliva reacts with the compounds in the tea to start oxidation before the leaves are even plucked. The oxidation and roast was increased to get a darker, more full-bodied brew—and also enhance the honey fragrance. The Qi of this tea is uplifting, sweeping upwards. You will feel elated drinking it. The tea soup is amber in colour.

- 904 Traditional Mu Zha Tie Guan Yin 木栅铁观音 (Muzha, Taiwan) 12

Traditionally Tie Guan Yin was manufactured over three or four days by hand. This time-consuming process is rarely used today, replaced by electric machinery that speeds up the process. Our Mu Zha Tie Guan Yin was made in the age-old way in Mu Zha. Medium in oxidation, this strong throaty infusion leaves one's mouth and throat comfortable and warm.

- 905 Spring 2022 Dong Ding Oolong 8

Dong Ding is one of the classic tea-growing districts in Taiwan, meaning "Frozen Summit". The tea was brought from Fujian long ago, and has become one of Taiwan's most famous teas. Our Dong Ding comes from the Nantou area, and is grown in limited quantities. Oxidation is around 30% and as a result the taste is quite light with a sweet roasted nut aroma.

906	An Ji Bai Cha Anji county of Zhejiang Province An Ji Bai Cha (安吉白茶) is a famous Chinese green tea hailing from Anji County of Zhejiang Province in China. This tea is made from fine, select buds that are carefully picked and processed by hand. It produces a bright and crisp liquor with fresh, smooth, delicately herbaceous flavours. This specimen comes from a natural farming small tea garden. It is very clean. An Ji Bai Cha is sometimes mistakenly described as a white tea. While 'Bai Cha (白茶)' does translate as white tea, this only refers to the appearance of the leaf of the tea plant rather than the tea type. In reality, this is a delicate green tea. It has a smooth and crisp character with a verdant profile. The taste is herbaceous, savoury, lightly vegetal and grassy. There are nutty, umami notes. The aftertaste is creamy-smooth, without astringency or bitterness. This is a light and delicate tea that nevertheless delivers plenty of complex flavours.	12
907	Guizhou Mao Jian (Miao village, Guizhou, Yunnan) A green tea from the province of Guizhou, in southern China, on the eastern border of Yunnan. [1]Difficult to access due to its mountainous terrain, this province, populated by numerous ethnic minorities, has remained isolated for a long time and is mainly turned towards agriculture. The name 'Mao Jian' translates as 'fur tips' and it refers to the appearance of the young tea leaves when they are plucked – they are covered with tiny 'hairs' or 'fur'. This rare tea is very time and labour consuming to produce, as approximately 50,000 buds need to be plucked to make only 500 grams of finished tea. After plucking, the leaves of this Mao Jian green tea are rolled and pan fried, resulting in compact needle-like dry leaves. This Mao Jian is from an alpine ecological ( i.e. organic) tea garden in Miao Village, Guizhou, China. Rich in selenium*, a rare trace element unique to the local soil; Mao Jian is pure buds, and the tea soup is rich in bean and seaweed flavours, fresh and sweet. with a long finish . Described as one of the finest tea in China.	10
908	Dragon Pearl Jasmine tea Dragon Pearl Jasmine is comprised of little, hand-rolled 'pearls' gently infused with jasmine flowers. The blend is pure joy, with the floral and sweet aromas of the light coloured brew. These prized jewels are hand rolled with green teas and jasmine flowers from the Fujian province of China. The subtropical, mild and humid climate provides the perfect environment for growing the tea and jasmine plants. Soft, downy green tea buds are picked in early spring and hand-rolled into pearls and kept in cold storage until the blooming of the jasmine flowers. Chinese tea growers are only able to harvest the jasmine flowers during the summer months when they bloom. The buds are handpicked during the day when they are closed. At night, when the flowers bloom, it can then be used to scent the tea pearls. This creates the unique flavor and distinctive aroma of the tea.	5
